Malaya

Malaya is a geographical term used to designate British possessions in Asia, the Pacific and Indian oceans. They consist of Federated Malay States, Unfederated Malay States and Straits Settlements on the Malay Peninsula; Christmas Islands and the Cocos Islands in the Indian Ocean and the island of Labuan in the Pacific.

After World War II, the territory was divided into the Malayan Union and Singapore. Together they formed a larger unit called Malaya (Federation), established Feb. 1, 1948 under British administration.

[See next card]

In Aug. 1957, the Federation became an independent country.

Malaysia.
Established Sept. 16, 1963, when the former British colonies of Sarawak, Singapore and Sabah (formerly Borneo, British North) joined the 11 states of the Malaya (Federation), which had been independent since Aug. 1957.
The term Malaysia was originally used as a geographic name for the Malay Archipelago, a group of islands including the East Indies (Sumatra, Java, Borneo) and other islands in that area, sometimes even including the Philippine Islands and New Guinea.
